Longmont-based Sangat Precision Machining & Grinding is pleased to announce that the company has a new full page advertisement running in the SME Magazine's Aerospace and Defense Yearbook. The advertisement is designed to highlight Sangat Precision's unusual focus on customer service and communication. "Too many companies in our industry take customer service and support as an afterthought" says Phil Smith, the company's Manager of Sales & Marketing. "At Sangat Precision we recognize that many companies can successfully make parts to a particular specification. However, very few recognize the end-game is to serve the needs of the customer as completely as possible. From our perspective, serving the customer's needs includes effective communication and lightning fast response to customer requests, including quickly turning around estimates. These simple actions put us head and shoulders above our competition."
